ARTS IN THE PARKS

2017 EVALUATION REPORT
About Arts in the Parks

Arts in the Parks encourages community building, enjoyment of local parks, and offers arts events for residents and tourists of all ages. Events include performances, dance, music, theatre, film, community-engaged work, and temporary installations by arts groups.

Selected parks are located throughout Toronto, from Etobicoke to Scarborough and North York to the downtown core. Arts in the Parks is a new initiative of the Toronto Arts Foundation and the Toronto Arts Council, being presented in partnership with the City of Toronto and Park People.
Arts in the Parks 2017: Partnerships

Toronto Arts Foundation’s Arts in the Parks aims to make arts accessible in neighbourhoods throughout the city. The program is made possible with the following partnerships:

Toronto Arts Council offers the Animating Toronto Parks grants program to support free arts programming presented by professional artists.

City of Toronto, through its Arts & Culture Services and Parks, Forestry and Recreation departments, is working closely with Toronto Arts Foundation to support the arts programming and facilitate the permit process.

Park People is an organization that works in partnership with communities, park staff and private enterprises to facilitate neighbourhood engagement in local parks, provide resources and information for local park citizens on best practices and build a network of local community park groups.

What Artists Have to Say

- Receiving funding makes it possible to focus on production and execution

- Being able to practice art in the midst of nature has had a calming and restorative effect on all of us.

- Love this program and look forward to seeing it grow and support a diversity of art-making while sparking the imaginations of residents across the city.

- The experience helped us to reinforce our belief in accessible culture while also introducing us to new audiences.

Arts in the Parks artists
Artists

Want to make arts accessible

Nearly 100% of artists say the best part of Arts in the Parks is bringing arts to the public and bringing people together. 75% want arts to be free and accessible in neighbourhoods and 76% want their work to reach new audiences.

Like working in public space

63% of artists who filled out the survey make arts in public spaces the main focus of their arts practice.

67% of artists appreciated being able to use the natural features of the park

Are skilled and experienced

67% of artists who filled out the survey have worked in parks for more than 5 years.

58% work mainly in performing arts
Artists

Appreciate program benefits

84% of artists and art groups benefited from being part of Arts in Parks Program.

Artists noted that word-of-mouth from last year’s event brought out a wider audience this year.

Face challenges

Dealing with the weather (50%) and City regulations and permits (54%) were the top two challenges for artists working in parks.

Received assistance

Most valued assistance provided by Arts in the Parks was: assistance with permits (62%); outreach into the local community (63%); volunteers on-site to direct audiences (63%); and marketing and promotion support. (63%)
Observations and Surprises

• Dealing with the weather (50%) and City regulations and permits (54%) were the top two challenges for artists working in parks.

• Some artists noted the importance of learning the different rhythms of each neighbourhood and the importance residents place on local events.

• People of all ages came to the parks and they stayed, even when it was raining.

• Artists were pleased that some City Councillors attended and others appreciated support given by City Parks staff.

• Art programs attracted diverse communities to the park. Some arts program encouraged interactions between the audience and artists and with art installations.
“The kinds of cultures that were attracted to us was global, people from all cultural and language backgrounds stopped to thank us, talk with us and share their own stories. Even when language was a barrier, people found a way to connect using the drums and percussion. Even when they didn't stop and participate, they smiled, waved, slow down, nodded, thumbs up, and jiggled their approval at us from a distance. We felt like we were adding to the ambience/experience of the park.”

Suggestions

Promotion and Marketing

- More flexible marketing/promotion plan; ability to make updates to Arts in the Parks website; start door-to-door outreach earlier
- More mainstream media promotion; hipper and younger voice on social media
- Explore group marketing
- Encourage support from local businesses – hosting special days, sponsoring refreshments, storage

Providing artists with videos of their work is extremely helpful to establishing their work in public spaces.

Arts in Parks artist
Build Community Relationships

- Ways for “outsider” artists to connect with community for more real engagement with neighbourhood (e.g. rehearsing on site)

- More local politicians out at events; AITP part of constituency event listings

Language and cultural barriers make it hard for people to attend – they need encouragement from people they trust. Building trust takes time.

Arts in the Parks artist
Suggestions

Scheduling and Programming

- Build awareness by having consistent presence in the park e.g.: expect something in this park every Tuesday evening in July

- Include programming in Neighbourhood Improvement Areas to build on work being done there; introducing residents to new parts of their own community

It’s hard to reach larger local audiences in parks that have not participated in the past.

Arts in the Parks artist
“Being quite a large park with challenging accessibility, we were always pleasantly surprised to see a small crowd of people suddenly round the bend and join us in time for the show. As well, the entire company was particularly delighted at one performance by visitors from the Northwood Seniors Centre. We were expecting them and had added an extra show to accommodate their travel time. Everyone from our cast made sure to escort all the seniors up and down the hill to our performance area and assist with any other mobility issues. There's a special conviviality that happens when we also act as hosts and not simply a company of actors.”

Suggestions

Artist Support

- Organize a meet-and-greet for AITP artists to discuss and exchange ideas
- Consider a multi-year AITP residency to help sustain a relationship with a park

It's hard to reach larger local audiences in parks that have not participated in the past.

Permits and Park Amenities

• Address glitches in permit process (noise exemptions)
• Rent portable toilets
• Better lines of communication with Park Supervisors; get more clarity about what types of activities are allowed in specific parks
“The park proved to be a remarkable place where the space suited everyone, and gave them the space they needed to get along. When we aren't engaging a person for a bit, the park is taking care of them through play spaces, greenery, fresh air. We found that once you are outside, in a place of repose and natural life, people are not only patient, but engaged by the natural surroundings in ways that you can't replicate indoors. In a sense, the natural world was our collaborator, and was able to hold many different people together and facilitate simple and nourishing points of interaction.”

About
This map illustrates where Arts in the Park attendees are residing within Toronto, as well as which areas of the city have direct access to Arts in the Parks events. The map consists of Toronto’s FSAs*, overlaid with surveyed event locations. The darker the area the higher percentage of Arts in the Park attendees reside there. The information was gathered from short and long form surveys attendees filled out at Arts in the Park events, which asked for their postal code. This map enables us to see which areas had the most attendees, and which areas may need more outreach to get residents out into parks and interacting with public art.

*FSA (forward sortation area) is the first three characters of a postal code (e.g. A1A1A1)
The case study maps provide a more specific example and clearer image as to who is attending and participating in Arts in the Parks events. It is most common that attendees come from areas local to the park, however people often travel outside of their neighbourhoods or communities to attend events.

The following three events/parks are examined:
1. Clay & Paper at Wincott Park
2. K Funk & Lady Ree at Lee Lifeson Park
3. Parks ‘N Wreck at Prairie Drive Park

Challenges

- Getting to the location was the most challenging aspect of volunteering for 47% of volunteers
- 31% of volunteers found the weather to be challenging and 16% felt the instructions they received were not clear
- Sometimes events were cancelled and volunteers were not notified
- Some volunteers felt there wasn’t enough for them to do and at times there were too many volunteers in the park
- Some noted problems in collecting surveys because of the timing, nature of the event, or the needs of artists
Suggestions

- Take care of volunteer needs. Shade, water, washrooms and somewhere to change into volunteer T-shirt
- Staffing needs to align with the needs of the event
- Experienced ambassadors should be given more to do
- In large parks make it easier for volunteers and the audience to find the event
- Better communication between planners, staff and volunteers
- More guidance from supervisors about interviewing audience members and artists
- Better plan for collecting audience surveys
Volunteering was an opportunity to:

- Make connections with arts community
- Find out about arts initiatives in the city
- Talk with the public about the event
- Participate in workshop events
“I enjoyed meeting with new people, learning something new (about the arts exhibits, shows happening on the day of volunteering) and saw new areas and parks.”

This survey was designed and distributed by Arts in the Parks partner, Park People. The survey was completed as part of their assessment process.
“The area is a diverse community and having an event that is multicultural and enjoyable lessens the isolation of newcomers & seniors. The park has also ample space and venue to host these kinds of performances.”

Community Organizer Observations

The community showcase event provided a positive platform for community members to express themselves and celebrate each other’s talents.

Good to see arts organizations expand their reach into underserved communities.

The program brought more traffic and people into the park. This helps make the area more safe.

Arts in the Parks provides residents with increased opportunities to participate in events they would not normally be able to see.
Benefits for the Community

- Helps address isolation by inviting residents to come to the park; an opportunity to meet neighbours and socialize
- Brings arts programming to an underserved area; programs like this fill a gap
- A valuable volunteer opportunity for local residents
